Keeping Veteran Families Together

Veterans and their families experiencing homelessness deserve and need a supportive environment to heal and grow together. That's what we offer.

Almost all transitional housing facilities separate family members by gender, splitting families when they most need to be united. Sons are forced to sleep in a separate building or wing from their mother starting at age 12. Young daughters are out of the protection of their fathers. Spouses sleep apart. Veterans forgo needed treatment out of desperation for their children. Bad things happen. Families fail.

At the AMVETS Charities Family Service Center, families stay together, leading to far better outcomes, keeping children safe, and opening the door for ailing veterans to heal and thrive once again.
